

Ken Surratt joined the Federal Reserve Bank of Cleveland as a regional outreach manager in 2019. There, he manages the development and execution of the department's regional outreach and engagement strategy across the bank's four-state district including Ohio, western Pennsylvania, eastern Kentucky and West Virginia's northern panhandle.

Prior to joining the Cleveland Fed, Surratt worked as deputy director of housing and community development for Cuyahoga County, where he led programming and policymaking such as the Cuyahoga County Demolition Program, Federal Community Development Block Grant and HOME Investment Partnerships Program for the 51 non-entitlement communities within the county.

Surratt has also held positions at Breakthrough Charter Schools in Cleveland and at the Center for Research on Education Outcomes in Stanford, California.